Enersense, a provider of zero-emission energy solutions, will deliver steel structures to Aker Solutions in Norway. Aker Solutions is involved in various offshore projects internationally. Aker Solutions has ordered steel structure modules (pre-assembled units) from Enersense for the Hugin A production platform which is part of the Aker BP-operated Yggdrasil oil and gas development in the North Sea. The order will be included in Enersense's Smart Industry business area's third quarter 2023 order book.

“This is a new opening for us in the Norwegian offshore market, and we believe that a well-executed project will enable the expansion of our cooperation into the rapidly growing energy market, where Aker Solutions has strong experience. This order is significant to Enersense Offshore and we are taking the next step on the way towards our growth targets. It shows that the investments in the ramp-up of Enersense Offshore, which we acquired in the autumn of 2021, are beginning to materialise and will enable us to further strengthen our own organisation and partner network,” says Jaakko Leivo, EVP, Smart Industry.

The project will begin with engineering and planning in late summer 2023, and the fabrication of the modules will start in Enersense's production facilities in Mäntyluoto towards the end of the year. The last modules are scheduled to be delivered in December 2024.
